Holds Monthly Meeting.
The regular meeting of the Confederate Memorial Literary Society was held yesterday morning at the Confederate Museum, Miss Sally Archer Anderson, presiding. It was an unusually full meeting, and a great deal of important business was transacted. New members elected yesterday include Mrs. James Caskie, of this city; W. W. Blaworth, of New York, life members; Mrs. Mary Battle, of Rocky Mount, N. C.; Mrs. Howard Meriwether Lovett, of Augusta, Ga.; Charles Marshall Jeffell, of New York, annual; Miss Sophie B. Wright, from Stonewall Jackson Chapter, New Orleans, in memoriam.

It was decided by the society to offer the hospitality of the museum to the members attending the Conference of the Department of Superintendence of the Education Association, which will be in session here next month. The museum will be thrown open to these guests for one day, from 2 to 3 P. M. Gifts received yesterday included a Colt's navy revolver used on the Sumter, the first Confederate States cruiser, which had been presented by Captain Semmes to Commodore Mason in 1865, given by his son to the Confederate Museum.

Randolph-Macon Alumnae Meetings.
Richmond Club of the Randolph-Macon Women's College alumnae will hold an important business meeting at the Jefferson Hotel to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Misses Munson and Becker will be present, and all former students of the college are urged to attend by the society. The Richmond Club, assisted by the alumnae from Ashland and Norfolk, will give a banquet to-morrow evening at the Jefferson at 7:30 o'clock, and Miss Margaret Munson, president of the Alumnae Association, Miss Helen Becker, Virginia State president, and Dr. William A. Webb, the new president of Randolph-Macon Women's College, will be among the prominent guests present.

The alumnae will hold a reunion in Lynchburg on Monday, and Misses Munson and Becker will attend both the luncheon and business meeting in that city.

Y. W. C. A. Entertainment.
An "Edna" exhibition will be held at the Young Women's Christian Association gymnasium, 101 South Fourth Street, this evening at 8:15 o'clock. It will be given by the gymnasium classes, assisted by the extension club, and the exercises include folkdancing and costume drills. The evening's entertainment will be concluded with a basketball game between the two advanced classes, and all members and their friends are invited to attend.

Eight-Year-Old Youth Kept in

Ignorance of Fact He Is

No Longer Ruler.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.

POOR little ex-Emperor Pu-i, who lost his throne just two years ago by virtue of an edict of the late Empress-Regent decreeing the establishment of a republic, has been kept until now in ignorance of the fact that he is no longer sovereign of the 100,000,000 souls comprising the population of what was once known as the Middle Kingdom.

A general impression prevails to the effect that he has been conveyed to one of the cities of the interior, Sing-Fu, the ancient capital of the empire, where the reigning family sought refuge at the time of the seizure of Peking by the international forces fourteen years ago, during the Boxer rebellion. But this is not the case.

The boy remains secluded within the innermost portion of the so-called Forbidden City, that is to say, in the recesses of the imperial palace at Peking, which, with its gardens, is shut off by lofty walls from the outer world.

Since Yuan-Shih-Kai has been President of the republic, and his dictator, and by his orders, the now eight-year-old ex-Emperor is under the immediate care of two of the deputy wives, or rather deputy widows, of the late Emperor Kwang-Su, his education is being provided by three tutors, two Chinese and one Mongol, while the control and administration of his household is confided to the aged Manchou noble, Tche-Tcheu, one of the most influential, honest and loyal of the counselors and adherents of the imperial family.

With regard to the principles of the imperial house, most of whom were permitted to retain their immense fortunes, the majority of them have migrated from Peking to Tientsin, where they live in considerable magnificence in the German concession of the city.

The most prominent of them is Prince Tsai-Tao, who is completely given up to horse racing and to other forms of sport. Two others, Prince Kong and Prince Su, are believed to harbor designs for the restoration of the monarchy, and are understood to have had a hard time in the revolution of the southern provinces. Prince Tsai-Tao, former Minister of Finance, has been named by the President as keeper of the imperial graves, while Prince Kou-Tsun, who at one time was designated as heir to the crown, has also remained at Peking, in his palace, and has become one of the principal advisers and adherents of Yuan-Shih-Kai.

Indeed, it was he who in a military uniform, of European cut, induced Yuan-Shih-Kai into office as President on the 19th of October last. He has long since cut off his pigtail, wears nothing but European clothes, and may be found nearly every afternoon playing billiards at the leading hotel in Peking.

Major-General Voyekoff, who has been appointed by the czar to succeed the late General Dedullin as military commander of every palace in which the Emperor and his family may happen to be residing, has long been an aide-de-camp of his sovereign, and is certainly the one who has most influence on his imperial master. It is thanks to his assistance and support that at the time when, some years prior to the birth of the young Czarvitch, the czar was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid fever, and hovered for several days between life and death, the Empress was able to prevent what he dreaded more than anything else, namely, the appointment of a regency during his illness; a regency which would undoubtedly at that moment have taken advantage of of Mrs. John T. Harris at her home in Harrisonburg this week.

Miss Phoebe Satterfield, of Germantown, Pa., is visiting Miss Rebecca Walker at 806 Park Avenue.

LITTLE EX-EMPEROR IN FORBIDDEN CITY

the opportunity to counteract all his projects of liberal reform.

As commander of the palaces, General Voyekoff will be responsible in the eyes of the Emperor, and in those of the government, as well as to the entire nation, for the safety of his sovereign and of the latter's immediate family. He will be the Cerebus, in fact, of the czar, and, inasmuch as the preservation of the latter from harm, particularly from the danger of assassination, is a consideration that is superior to all others, everything is subordinated to the measures which General Voyekoff may see fit to inaugurate with this object in view. That is what renders the position of commandant of the palace one of such great importance and power. Everybody and everything have to give way to him and to bend to his orders, when he considers that the safety of his imperial charges is involved.

President Grevy was compelled to resign the chief magistracy of the French republic in December, 1887, for having bestowed the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon Edmond Blanc, whose principal title to fame is that he is the chief owner of the public gambling tables at Monte Carlo.

It may be recalled that the bestowal of the Cross of the Legion upon Edmond Blanc led to such popular outcry as to result in what was described at the time as the Legion of Honor scandal, and to the discovery that Greys's son-in-law, Daniel Wilson, who lived with his wife at the Elysées, had been engaged in a corrupt traffic in connection with the bestowal of these decorations.

Several of the confederates of Daniel Wilson in the affair were sentenced to terms of imprisonment, but Daniel Wilson, although indicted, was never brought to justice, owing to his having taken advantage of his residence at the Elysées to secure from the Department of the Interior and from the prefecture of police, in his father-in-law's name, the dossiers or records of an immense number of men in public life, which he threatened to publish abroad if he were sent to jail. Consequently, he escaped punishment, in return for the surrender of the dossiers in question.

If I recall this ancient story, it is because the present French Cabinet, of which the mysterious Joseph Caillaux is the predominant member, has just distinguished itself by promoting Edmond Blanc to the rank of officer of the Order of the Legion of Honor. It may safely be taken for granted that the hands both of President Poincaré and of the grand chancellor of the Legion of Honor have been forced in the matter.

It is perfectly true that Edmond Blanc has the finest racing stable in France, and that he has won the Grand Prix no less than three times.

But his wins have never been popular. On at least two occasions attempts have been made to lynch him on the race course, owing to the conviction of the public that his horses had been run unfairly. And at least twice when he won the Grand Prix the President of the republic for the time being has declined to extend to him the official congratulations customary in such a case; while the French Jockey Club has relentlessly excluded him from its portals.

The promotion of Edmond Blanc in the Order of the Legion of Honor cannot be considered as contributing to its prestige, and cannot fail to evoke memories of the questionable circumstances under which he obtained the cross in the first place.

Emperor William and King Manuel of Portugal met the other day for the first time since the latter's marriage, at the Castle of Sigmaringen, on the occasion of the funeral of the Dowager Princess Leopold of Hohenzollern, sister of the late King Luis of Portugal. After the obsequies were over, Manuel had an interview lasting over two hours with the Kaiser, at which no one else was present.

It is worth while mentioning this, as it has been repeatedly asserted in print on both sides of the Atlantic, that Emperor William had adopted a hostile attitude towards King Manuel, and that at the time of his marriage he had insisted that the customary honors should be withheld from him. Byrd-Floyd.
Cape Charles, Va., January 29.—Eastern Shore society came in large numbers to picturesque Hangar's Episcopal Church, at Bridgetown to-day, to witness the marriage of Miss Grace Floyd, only daughter of Dr. G. Fred Floyd, a member of the Accomac and Northampton bars, by the rector, Rev. Edward Burgess. The quaint old English ceremony was used. Mr. and Mrs. Byrd left on the afternoon express for an extended Southern tour. They will visit points in Florida and Cuba. After returning from the honeymoon, they will reside at Parkside, Va.

RUNAWAY GIRL FOUND WITH PARISIAN BELLE COMPANY
Orange, Va., January 29.—A telegram from Washington completely upset the cast of the Parisian Belle, a traveling company, which showed here to-night. The telegram requested that the police keep a lookout for Pauline Terry, a seventeen-year-old girl of Washington, D. C., who ran away from her parents about two weeks ago. Sergeant Winn found the girl in the east answering the description given. She was traveling under the name of Pauline Ross. He at once put her under surveillance and notified her family. Her two brothers arrived on a later train and took their sister back to Washington.

Social and Personal

The dance given by the German Club of the University of Virginia last evening at Fry Springs, near Charlottesville, was a beautiful affair in every detail. Among the girls who left Richmond yesterday to attend the German and the P. K. Society dance to-night were Miss Janet Roy Montague, daughter of Congressman and Mrs. Andrew Jackson Montague; Miss Therese Nurney; Miss Virginia Shoop; William Miller and Will Truett.

Reception for Visitors.
Several hundred guests, who included many members of the General Assembly and prominent Richmond people, were invited by Mrs. Beverley B. Munford yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock to meet Miss Lida Shaw King, dean of the Women's College at Brown University, and Miss Eleanor Green, of Providence, R. I. It was a brilliant event, and the drawing-rooms of the Munford home, at 503 East Grace Street, were thronged with visitors during receiving hours to meet the distinguished guests of honor. Decorations were in jonquils and narcissus, and a big silver bowl of spring flowers were used on the tea table. Mrs. Munford received with Miss King and Miss Green, and was assisted by Mrs. Melville C. Branch, Mrs. Robert G. Cabell, Mrs. James Branch Cabell, Mrs. Thomas Burton Snodgrass and Miss Virginia McKenney. Several of the younger society girls did the honors in the dining-room.
